The South African racists are stepping up their undermining activities against Mozambique. This may be witnessed by the numerous evidences given by prisoners, by the arms marked "Made in the South African Republic" that have been captured by the (?army) units of the people's liberation forces of Mozambique in Manica Province after counter-revolutionary groups were crushed. According to evidence presented by prisoners, warplanes and helicopters of the South African Army are delivering munitions and arms to camps of reactionaries whom the Western press calls the National Resistance Movement. Pretorian instructors are training them in modern methods of waging war. The journal 'Africa' notes in this connection that the remnants of the counter-revolutionary group have repeatedly tried to hinder the people of Mozambique from building a new life. The Pretorian regime is not only assisting them in their armed sorties on Mozambican territory but also supply their (?chiefs) with bases in the South African Republic, in particular in north-eastern Transvaal.

It is therefore not surprising in the least that the so-called "Voice of Free Africa" radio station has found refuge there - this very station that is constantly slandering the progressive transformations that the Frelimo is undertaking, trying to incite inter-tribal discord, to sow the seeds of dissatisfaction and cause disturbances in the country. The invasion forces which are (?slipped) into Mozambique in order to attack (?and beat) Party activists, to blow up bridges, burn crops and destroy roads are formed from among the cutthroats [words indistinct].
