Mozambique military commander on actions against “bandits” in Nampula (Text) The Mozambique armed forces stationed in Nampula province killed 90 armed bandits and captured 13 during operations carried out over the past two months in different areas of the province. This information was disclosed by the provincial military commander during the recent routine session of Nampula’s provincial party committee. In his report, the provincial military commander also revealed that the FPLM forces captured an assortment of war materiel. In the same period, more than 5,000 people were released from the enemy’s captivity and 90 cattle and other property belonging to residents were recovered. According to the military official, at present the armed forces in Nampula, in co-ordination with the political and administrative organs, are involved in organising the recently released residents and in the building of their homes in communal villages.
