MNR attack on educational institute beaten off by teachers and students (Text)
Students and teachers at a college in southern Mozambique have been describing how the attackers. The incident took place on Saturday night [9th August] at the Umbeluzi teachers' training institute, about 30 km from the South African border. The terrorists fired three rocket grenades at the institute while the teachers and students were inside watching television. The terrorists then tried to storm the college, but were surprised to find the students and teachers, accompanied by militiamen, shooting back. A total of four terrorists were killed and the others fled, leaving the four bodies and two assault rifles. There were no casualties among the students, teachers and militiamen, and the college building suffered only slight damage. (Maputo in English for Southern Africa 1100 gmt 12 Aug 86)
