

Mozambique and South Africa establish border communication links South African Army Chief, Gen Jacobus Liebenberg, who arrived in Maputo on 25th January for a meeting of the joint security commission, said at a news conference after the meeting that border communications between Mozambique and South Africa had been established "with the aim of facilitating contacts between the security forces of the two sides", Maputo radio reported on the 25th. "Channels between Maputo and Pretoria have also been established", he added, and the establishment of contact groups drawn from the two security forces was being studied. Investigation into "those within South Africa who support acts of terrorism against Mozambique" was continuing, Liebenberg said. 181
