[Text] Talks between Mozambique and Zimbabwe began in Maputo this afternoon with delegations headed by Presidents Joaquim Chissano and Robert Mugabe, respectively.

The two countries will assess the (?achievements) of southern Africa's general struggle for peace and against apartheid. They will also review bilateral cooperation in the areas of security and transport.

President Joaquim Chissano said that Robert Mugabe's visit to Mozambique is unusual in that this is his first official visit as Zimbabwe's head of state. President Chissano also stressed that Robert Mugabe visits Mozambique as chairman of ZANU-PF after the merger between ZANU and the former ZAPU party. He said the Zimbabwean people had overcome division, which is our enemies' instrument.

Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe said his visit to Mozambique was like a return home, a return which, he said, gives him the opportunity to look back. Robert Mugabe said that memories go a long way back. We must not forget that this was the house where we began our struggle, President Robert Mugabe said. He added that when our house was burning the sister country who helped extinguish the fire was Mozambique. The Zimbabwean head of state said that his visit to Mozambique will permit a review of problems affecting Mozambique and Zimbabwe.

Robert Mugabe stressed that Mozambique's cause is Zimbabwe's cause and that, as in the past, the two peoples, parties, and states will continue fighting for the same cause and objectives.

The Mozambican delegation to the talks includes Prime Minister Mario da Graça Machungo; Security Minister Mariano Matsinhe; Foreign Affairs Minister Pascoal Mocumbi; and Interior Minister Manuel Antonio.

The Zimbabwean delegation includes Defense Minister Enos Nkala; Minister of State for Security Affairs (Mamba Juwi) [title and name as heard]; and Major General (Gava), chief of general staff in the Ministry of Defense [title as heard].

It is believed the Mozambican head of state will host a dinner in honor of his Zimbabwean counterpart tonight.

President Robert Mugabe is expected to visit Beira tomorrow, where he will tour the Beira corridor.
