

Mozambican Prime Minister on constitutional revision (Text) Premier Mario Machungo said in Stockholm that if the Mozambican people decide during constitutional revision debates that there should be more than one party, their wish will be respected. Machungo told Swedish parliamentarians the armed bandits should submit their proposals to the popular debates and not try to improve them through armed force. The Premier, in answering the parliamentarians' questions, said any alteration to the institutional structure in Mozambique will only be done according to the will of the people. Mario Machungo added that the government's peace initiatives aim to convince the promoters and protagonists of violence inside the outside the country to stop the massacres.
