

Chanting in the dark

WANT peace in South Africa? Try sitting in the dark chanting with hands on knees and palms turned upwards.

That at least is the advice from Mozambican leader Joaquim Chissano, who credits last year's end of the civil war and the best corn crop for 25 years to the Technology of Consciousness, taught in Holland by His Holiness the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

Chissano, his wife Marcelina, all his ministers and their wives as well as large sections of the army have been chanting in the dark for 20 minutes each day. What's more, he says, as soon as they started, agreement to end that country's civil war was reached.
