

Uganda slams Portugal

UGANDA delegate to the United Nations Emanuel N. Daula said here in a debate on Portuguese overseas territories before the Trusteeship Committee that his Government "abhorred and condemned the nefarious policies" of Portugal.

The Portuguese Office maintained in Kampala, since the days of the British rule, had recently been closed by order of the Government of Uganda, he stated.

Time was against Portugal, even if she continued to dig her head in the sand. He could imagine "the epitaph on the tombstone" of Portugal after her downfall to read: "Never before in the history of imperialism and colonialism has so much been so cruelly denied to so many for so long by so few."

His delegation would support any resolution that would seek to hasten the day of self-determination and independence for these territories.

His delegation would also support any measures which the United Nations deemed necessary to assist the development and welfare of the indigenous people under "Portuguese Imperialism."
