

MNR, Umita in losing battle X

SIR — On the eve of New Year, when the leaders of Zimbabwe, joined by leaders from the Frontline States and heads of the liberation movements in Southern Africa, were celebrating the historical change in the political infrastructure of Zimbabwe, the South African-backed MNR bandits were once again staining their hands with the blood of innocent civilians by attacking a passenger train near Maputo, killing and wounding many passengers.

This savage attack is yet another proof of the apartheid regime's policy of intimidation and destabilisation against the Frontline States.

These barbaric attacks will in no way weaken the resolve of the oppressed people of South Africa and the Frontline States in their just struggle against the racist Pretoria regime.

How long will the innocent people have to suffer at the hands of these terrorist groups? When will the misguided elements of MNR and Umita realise that they are pawns in the hands of the Pretoria regime, which is using them to terrorise their own people? Certainly they are fighting a losing battle.
