

Mozambique: South African "military agent" killed
(Text) A South African military agent was recently killed by Mozambican and Zimbabwean joint units in Sofala province. This was disclosed by AIM today, citing 'Diario de Mocambique'. AIM said that the South African agent was killed when the Mozambican and Zimbabwean joint forces destroyed two armed bandit camps in Nhadongo and Nhanchera [phonetic] in Nhamatanda district, Sofala province. According to a political commissar of the second military sector in that region of our country, in these clashes, 10 bandits were killed and a quantity of war materiel captured. He added that one bandit was also captured while another surrendered to our FPLM forces. The surrendered bandit said that the South African specialist belonged to a bigger group which was concentrated in one of the camps. (Maputo home service in Portuguese 1730 gmt 23 Jan 88)
