

ANC delegation in Mozambique ANC Secretary-General Alfred Nzo, leading a delegation which included Executive Committee members Thabo Mbeki and Jacob Zuma, arrived in Maputo on 2nd January, Radio Mozambique (Maputo) reported that day. It noted Nzo's comment that the ANC hoped that certain changes in South Africa, such as the release of jailed leaders "and the possibility of those leaders having free political activity", would be the start of a new climate in which South Africans could have an internal debate on the country's problems. On 3rd January, the delegation had meetings with President Joaquim Chissano and Foreign Minister Pascoal Mocumbi, reported by the radio which quoted Chissano as saying that the regular contacts between Frelimo and the ANC at frontline states' meetings were "not enough for the necessary exchange of ideas". He also briefed the delegation on his recent meetings with South African President De Klerk and the Reverend Allan Boesak. [1]
