

Mozambique: British military delegation in Maputo (Text) A British military delegation was impressed with the young officers stationed in Magude, who have been trained with British assistance. AIM [Mozambique Information Agency], citing the British military attache, reports that the delegation, headed by Lt-Gen Anthony Walker, visited Maputo this week. AIM says the Mozambique army units, trained in Nyanga and currently stationed in Magude, are protecting the Limpopo railway. The news agency cited the British military attache as saying that his country is particularly interested in the railway which serves the hinterland [preceding word in English] countries. The visiting delegation held separate meetings with the Defence Minister and the armed forces' Chief of General Staff, among other officials. (Maputo home service in Portuguese 1900 gmt 9 Jun 89)
