

Mozambique: call for change in sexual behaviour to combat AIDS (Text) The Mozambican Health Ministry has now registered 20 cases of the killer disease AIDS. This has been announced by the Deputy Health Minister, Igrejas Campos. The current confirmed cases are double the figure in March, when the authorities reported that nine cases of the disease had been confirmed. Dr Igrejas Campos called for more responsible sexual behaviour as part of measures to minimise the spread of the disease. Mozambique has indicated that it would embark on a (?week) of stepped-up educational activities to alert the public to the lethal nature of AIDS. This would coincide with 1st December, designated by the World Health Organisation as international anti-AIDS day. Films on AIDS are to be shown at movie theatres and other public places, while special programmes about the disease will be broadcast on national radio.
